

E-SOURCES ON WOMEN AND GENDER

Feminist Collections (v. 32, no. 1, Winter 2011)

BLOG

RACIALICIOUS.COM — “the intersection of race and pop culture” — is owned and edited by “certified media junkie” Latoya Peterson, who “provides a hip-hop feminist and anti-racist view on pop culture with a special focus on video games, anime, American comics, manga, magazines, film, television, and music.”

DATABASES

FRAGEN (FRAMES on GENDER) is collecting core feminist texts from twenty-nine European countries, “such as books, articles and pamphlets that were influential in the development of feminist ideas in the second half of the twentieth century.” Search the database of digitized texts at www.Fragen.nu.

“Disparity on land access is one of the major causes for social and gender inequalities in rural areas, and it jeopardizes, as a consequence, rural food security as well as the wellbeing of individuals and families,” explains the opening page of the U.N. Food & Agriculture Organization’s GENDER AND LAND RIGHTS database at www.fao.org/gender/landrights. “This database contains country-level information on social, economic, political and cultural issues related to the gender inequalities embedded in those rights.”

LIBRARY COLLECTION

The University of Wisconsin System's WOMEN & SCIENCE program has a collection of circulating materials that is now accessible through the UW–Oshkosh's online catalog and retrievable by anyone in the UW System through Universal Borrowing: <http://www.uwosh.edu/wis/library-resources-1>.

ORGANIZATIONS WITH ONLINE PRESENCE

The INSTITUTE ON WOMEN & CRIMINAL JUSTICE of the Women's Prison Association is "a national policy center dedicated to reforming policy and practice affecting women in the criminal justice system, publishing timely research and information on criminal justice-involved women, serving as a resource to policymakers, media, and the public concerned about women and justice, and supporting the voices of women who've experienced incarceration in advocating for change"; <http://www.wpaonline.org/institute/about.htm>.

The SELF-EMPLOYED WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION (SEWA) in India is a trade union for women workers of "the unorganised sector" of the population — which includes more than 94% of India's working women; www.sewa.org.

RESEARCH GUIDE

University of Wisconsin graduate student Virginia Corvid has developed WOMEN'S HISTORY RESEARCH IN ARCHIVES, at <http://researchguides.library.wisc.edu/womenshistoryinarchives>, which "seeks to promote women's history related archival research by providing resources for finding archives and relevant archival collections, explaining archival organization and gathering together relevant links and references."
